Showers and thunderstorms are expected to develop along the state line later this evening. Storm coverage will slowly push eastward through the week as an upper level disturbance pushes closer to the region

Moist southeast winds will continue across the Borderland Tuesday, allowing scattered thunderstorms to develop. Much of the Rio Grande Valley may remain dry through the afternoon, but by early evening all areas will have a chance of thunderstorms. Temperatures will remain a few degrees below normal.

Isolated to Scattered Showers & Thunderstorms

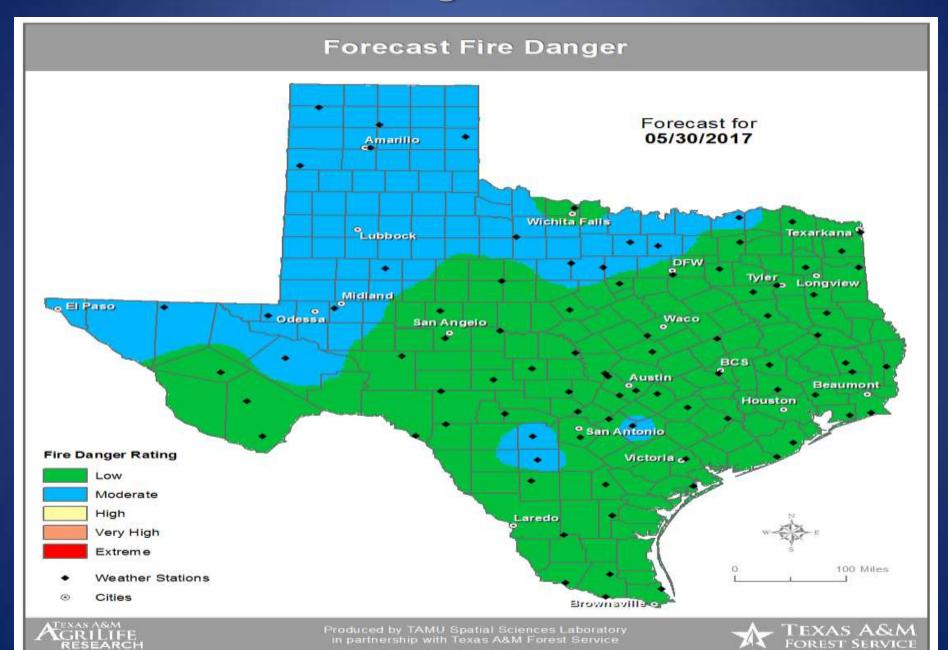

Isolated to scattered showers and thunderstorms are expected today, with the higher rain chances in southern parts of West Central Texas.

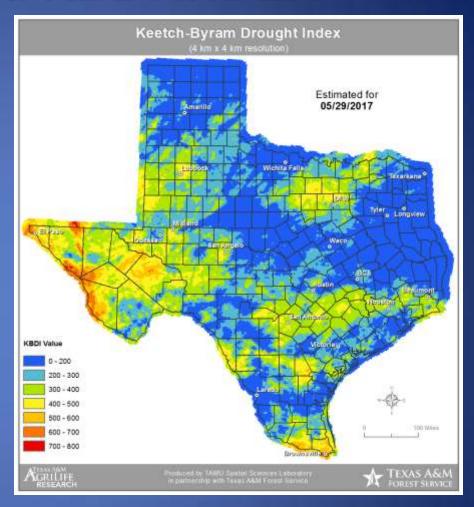

After patchy fog lifts this morning, isolated to scattered showers and thunderstorms will be possible with highs in the low to mid 80s
